WASHINGTON, April 5—Edwin A. Walker, who resigned from the Army to take up the cause of "Constitutional" conservatism, challenged today the loyalty of Secretary of State Dean Rusk.

The former major general said he questioned Mr. Rusk's dedication to the security, sovereignty and Constitutional system of the United States. He linked the Secretary to a "hidden control apparatus" that he contended was dictating a "no-win" policy toward the world Communist conspiracy.

Testifying for a second and final day before the Special Senate Preparedness Subcommittee, Mr. Walker also said that Walt Whitman Rostow, head of the State Department's Policy Planning Council, was "very influential" in the "apparatus" that was spreading the "soft-line policy" in the State Department.

Throws Punch At Reporter

As Mr. Walker left the hearing in the Senate caucus room, the six-foot, 200-pound former general threw a punch at Tom Kelly, a five-foot six-inch, 155-pound reporter for The Washington Daily News.

Mr. Rusk, who was testifying on foreign aid in another part of the Capitol and the Walker accusations were not
